

The Sinclair decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election only drives home the prior speculated dangers of media consolidation. Now it is a reality.

I am an undecided voter, and I ask you to consider the effect of this decision upon voters who are still unsure of who to vote for. Also, consider the fact that it may backfire and make people angry with a party who would stoop to such obvious and desperate actions in order to win an election. I was in the middle before, but this kind of action offends my sense of fair play and honest presentation of facts to viewers. All one has to do is look at the fact that you are not pre-empting regular programming for a so-called documentary of equal negative impact about President Bush.

Thank you,

A possible Kerry voter now.

Christine Rosenbalm in Michigan